

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A medication delivery device by which multiple medications are encased within separate containers so that each of the said medications are not in actual physical contact with each other until the said containers degrade within a live body, with said separate containers being themselves embedded in a series of such containers, that is, containers within containers, which containers are biodegradable within a live body.